CAUTHE 2017 Bill Faulkner Workshop for PhD Scholars and Early Career Researchers

Tuesday 7 February 2017

University of Otago, Dunedin New Zealand

PhD scholars and Early Career Researchers (ECRs) who completed a PhD within the past five years are invited to attend the annual Bill Faulkner PhD/ECR workshop to be held immediately prior to the CAUTHE 2017 conference. The workshop will allow PhD students and ECRs to discuss key issues and seek feedback from more experienced academics from around the world. It will provide opportunities for further development of research skills that will be of help to emerging scholars in achieving their academic goals.

Theme: Creating a personal identity – be seen and be heard

The workshop will focus on creating a personal research identity, capturing impact and the contribution of these issues to grants and funding. The program will include an opening presentation, small group facilitated discussions, concurrent activities, mentoring sessions, a panel discussion and networking opportunities with fellow students and senior academics. The workshop will finish with an informal drinks and networking function for registered conference delegates.

Keynote presentations, facilitators and panel discussions will include:

- Professor Marianna Sigala, University of South Australia, co-editor of Journal of Service Theory & Practice
- Professor Graham Miller, University of Surrey, UK, professor of sustainability in business and co-editor of Journal of Sustainable Tourism
- Dr Kathryn Sutherland, Associate Dean, Victoria University of Wellington, NZ, co-editor International Journal for Academic Development and author of Success in Academia?
- Associate Professor Pierre Benckendorff, The University of Queensland, Australia
